

Why most published real-robot comparisons are noise

Exact 95% Wilson intervals. A pooled two-proportion z-test is less conservative and separates 70% from 80% at $n = 145$ per arm - still 7x the $n = 20$ annotated above.